

ALI Scaffolding Manual

The scaffolding sessions will be 30 min, twice a week. There are three focuses to the session: 1) child's well-being and learning environment, 2) reading progress and discussion of the book, and 3) discussing specific comprehension strategies and new vocabulary.

- I. Start each session by checking in with the student. Ask them about their weekend/week and general events in their lives. Ask the child if they had the chance to listen to the book and whether they faced any challenges in doing so. Inquire about logistical (e.g., quit room, finding time) or emotional (e.g., motivational) challenges. Ask the child to brainstorm possible solutions. Don't provide specific advice, but encourage them to involve their parents in finding a solution.
- II. Transition to talking about the book. Ask the child what page they are on and praise their progress. Engage the child around the book content. Ask them to summarize what happened in the book, while probing about events, characters, and connections to child's own experiences. Ask the child to predict what will happen next in the book.

- III. Ask the child about vocabulary words from the book (choose low frequency words). Ask them to define the word for you or to use it in a sentence. Show them how they can figure out the meaning of the word from context. Teach children to use metacognitive strategies while listening/reading to books.

Vocabulary Development Activities

(adapted from Beck & McKeown, 2007)

Do this for 2-3 vocabulary words

- Provide new vocabulary words in varied contexts to support learning
 - “In the story, it said that the animals found the robbers’ table full of good things to eat, and so they had a feast.”
- Ask students to process word at a deeper level to interact with their meaning
 - “What do you think the meaning of feast is? Try to explain using your own words”
 - “A feast is a big special meal with lots of delicious food”
- Ask the child to connect the word to their own experience
 - “Can you remember the last time you had a feast?”
- Ask children to repeat the word and create a phonological representation of it
 - “Say the word with me: feast”
- Give examples in contexts other than the one used in the book
 - “People usually have a feast on a holiday or to celebrate something special. We all have a feast on Thanksgiving Day.”
- Ask the child to make judgments about examples
 - “Which would be a feast: eating an ice cream cone or eating at a big table full of all kinds of food? Why?”
- Ask the child to construct their own examples:
 - “If you wanted to eat a feast, what kinds of food would you want?”
- Reinforce the word’s phonological and meaning representations
 - “What’s the word that means a big special meal?”
- On subsequent sessions reinforce briefly the words discussed in previous sessions
 - “Do you remember what the word feast means?”
 - “Wow, it sounds like you had a feast for dinner last night”

Comprehension Strategies

- Model for children how to utilize metacognitive strategies (reread, look-back, visualize, think aloud, make connections, predict, and self explanation).
- Ask the child some comprehension questions
- Teach how to clarify unknown words and phrases
- Discern the key information and global meaning of the chapters

- Encourage the child to use own knowledge to predict missing information/guess what happens next
- Model and practice with the child asking relevant questions
- Written narrative:
 - Narrative structure
 - Sequencing
 - Character Profiling
- Teach children how to make inference from basic cohesive inferences (e.g., resolving pronouns) to more sophisticated inferences (e.g., bridging, elaborative, and evaluative)
- Encourage the child to discuss and use their prior knowledge to add their understanding of the book.

LAARC comprehension

Week 1:

- Comprehension Monitoring (p.8 PDF)
 - Model (remind students to pay attention to the story structure)
 - Begin reading and periodically model “Is everything making sense? What doesn’t make sense about what I just read?”
 - Model specific fix-up strategies (using pictures/context clues, asking questions, rereading a sentence, etc.); p.37 PDF
 - Use universal signs students can use when they don’t understand what’s been read and put them on a poster with reminders of fix-up strategies
- Predicting (narrative text, p.10 PDF)
 - “Predicting is making guesses about what will come next in the text you are reading. You should make predictions a lot while you read. For now, you should stop every 2 pages that you read and make some predictions.”
 - I am going to make predictions while I read this book. I will start with just the cover here. Hmm...I see a picture of an owl. It looks like it is a he--is wearing pajamas, and he is carrying a candle. I predict that this is going to be a make-believe story because owls don’t really wear pajamas and carry candles. I predict it is going to be about this owl, and it is going to take place at nighttime...”
 - “I have made some good predictions so far in the book. From this part on I want you to make predictions with me. Each of us should stop and think about what might happen next...Okay, now let’s hear what you think and why...”
 - “I have called you together to work on making predictions while you read this and other books. After every few pages I will ask each of you to stop and make a prediction. We will talk about your predictions and then read on to see if they come true.”
 - “When you’re reading by yourself this week, remember what we have been working on--making predictions. Be sure to make predictions every two or three pages and ask yourself why you made the prediction you did. Check to see whether your prediction came true!”
